THE ALFRED MEMORIAL HOSPITAL.

[COMMUNICATED.]

We have often admired the prompt and even enthusiastic alacrity with which calls for any benevolent purpose are responded to in New South Wales. Whatever may be the moral shortcomings of the colony, it may at least claim credit for no small portion of that charity which covereth a multitude of sins. Any undertaking devoted "Deo et pauperibus," to God and to God's poor, finds a ready and liberal support. Nor is it less true that we are a loyal people, in this colony attached to the Throne is not merely calculating regard for a system of Government which has been pre-eminently successful in combining liberty with order, but a warm and generous sentiment, an instinct of reverence and affection.

Both these characteristics of our colony have been conspicuous in the noble subscription to the "Alfred Memorial Hospital," and with the sentiments of loyalty and benevolence, there has doubtless mingled a solemn feeling of thankfulness to the Almighty for a great deliverance from a grievous danger. We rejoice to see that the public mind is at present earnestly bent on considering how we may best raise and perpetuate an institution which shall nobly express the loyal, benevolent, and pious impulses which have urged us to give so largely and so freely. It would be a great evil were we to waste the funds at our disposal in a shabby, ill-contrived, or insufficient structure. But it must also be remembered that it would be a great evil should the discussion of the how and the where be prolonged till either the present glow of public zeal in the cause had time to cool, or controversy had produced division and bitterness. The subscription for the "Memorial Hospital" has thus far been largely supported by the hard-working classes; and those who ought to lead and direct their efforts, must beware of checking popular earnestness by ill-adviced advice. If they multiply objections and objections, if they show themselves captious rather than practical, contentiones cupientes quam veritates—they will lose not only time, but what is yet more valuable—the impulse of public enthusiasm. The sooner we set to work the better.

Without professing any special or technical knowledge of the subject, we hope to do some service by stating popularly the general conditions of the problem to be solved, some of which appear to have been strangely overlooked in the published correspondence on the subject. Without disguising our own views, we shall chiefly endeavour to furnish fair and sufficient data from which our readers may draw conclusions for themselves.

It will not be disputed that in erecting the proposed Memorial Hospital we should consult the public taste and convenience, and public utility. To attain the former end, the building must be handsome, substantial, on a large scale, and in a style appropriate to its purpose. It should also be erected on a conspicuous and commanding site, and one where there is little danger of its being hidden or pressed upon by other buildings hereafter. To attain the latter, it should be in an airy situation, perfectly drained and ventilated. It should have ample verandahs, in which patients, barely able to leave their beds, may take the air, and whence they may look forth on a cheerful and varied prospect. It should comprise all the latest improvements in furniture and arrangement; all the appliances which modern science has devised for promoting the comfort and cleanliness of the sick, the supply of wholesome and palatable food, the facility of surgical operations, and the curative treatment of disease. It should have an ample and well-looked staff of visiting sisters and nurses. It should be central, at least so far as to be easy of access both to patients and to medical attendants. Lastly—and to this we would especially invite attention—it should be erected with a wise regard not only to the funds actually at our command, but also to the income on which we may fairly reckon as likely to be available for its maintenance.

In the consideration of future income is particularly important, because strong impulses are rarely durable. A few scores of hard-working men will probably contribute heretofore to the support of the "Memorial Hospital," but apart from Government aid (if any) we may safely predict that it will be upheld mainly by a limited class, already heavily taxed for similar purposes. The yearly subscribers will be pretty nearly the same persons whose names we are accustomed to see in the subscription lists for every useful and benevolent undertaking. We ought, therefore, to avoid any plan which threatens to involve needless working expenses, and entail a larger annual outlay than is requisite for the effective carrying on of our central and model hospital.

Thus far we trust we have carried all our readers with us. And perhaps we should find that few dissentients were to be met, should the contemplated building, ought, in some manner, to be made available for professional education, and that a convalescent hospital, in connection with the central institution, ought to be established ere long near one of our great railway lines, and within a moderate distance of Sydney. Country air and country fare should complete the cures commenced by scientific treatment in the ward of the "Memorial Hospital."

Looking at all the conditions to be satisfied we cannot but think that the weight of argument is decidedly in favour of the site of the present Infirmary, as better calculated than any other to satisfy the various admitted requirements of the case. But before applying those requirements arithmetically to test the merits of the rival schemes, we wish to suggest a few considerations which seem to have been overlooked or too little regarded.

In the first place, then, the resolutions of the public meeting at which the Alfred Hospital was resolved on pointed absolutely to the site of the present Infirmary. We freely admit that if overwhelming reasons for a different plan were suggested, another public meeting might overrule the original resolution. But nothing short of a clear and grave preponderance of public advantage would justify the proposal to apply the funds raised for one purpose to another hardly to be carried out without acrimonious discussion, little likely to result in that harmony of feeling which is the basis of successful action. And, although subscriptions already paid could hardly be recalled, it might well happen that some intending subscribers would hold themselves released from their promises by a change of purpose which they honestly disapproved.

Secondly, it is no longer possible, as we have heard suggested in several quarters, to get rid of the site of the present Infirmary by sale or exchange. Could it, indeed, be disposed of—valuable as it is—for a large sum of money, as soon as the Memorial Hospital was completed elsewhere, there might be a prospect of a handsome endowment for the new institution. But, in the first place, the ground on which the Infirmary stands is still "Government land."

And, apart from this, there is the south wing just receiving additions and improvements in the shape of baths, lavatories, latrines, and so forth, which will make it fairly suited to the demands of modern medical science—a structure by no means discreditably, and assuredly not to be abandoned for a whim. Yet further, there is the "Nightingale wing," for the accommodation of a numerous body of nurses and sisters; a handsome and admirably-designed building, which it would be shameful waste to convert to any other purpose. The honoured lady whose name it bears has pronounced this wing to be a model of completeness and comfort; constructed on a plan so excellent as scarcely to be capable of improvement; equal, or superior, to anything of the kind in the mother country. Whatever else we may change, this building, and its destination, must abide. Finally, the whole of the western building must come down. It is only a question of time. It is much dilapidated, ill-designed, ill-ventilated, and entirely deficient in many appliances which the nineteenth century has learnt to regard as indispensable to curative treatment. It could only be made passably convenient by an outlay of at least £12,000, and even then there would be considerable risk of damage to the walls, with the certainty of an eye-sore to our capital in the shape of a patched and unsightly edifice. All the western frontage of the present site must be cleared; the question must arise, "What shall we do with it?"

We commend these preliminary considerations to the notice of our readers, before proceeding to discuss the merits of the question in detail.

SUGAR GROWING IN NEW SOUTH WALES.

THE Sugar Crop is assuming important dimensions. From the early date at which Mr. SCOTT pressed the subject of the adaptation of the sugar cane to the coast lands of this colony upon public attention, and he has been, perhaps, the most consistent and persistent advocate the plant has had in New South Wales—it has gradually been taking root.

The seed soon has germinated in many localities, and we now possess conclusive evidence that the sugar-cane has taken a place amongst our crops, and that that place is likely at no distant date to be the first.

There lies before us a tabulated statement of the cane crop of New South Wales, published in Saturday's issue of the Sydney Mail, being the result of an inquiry instituted by the proprietors of that journal. From this valuable document it is apparent that cane-growing is no longer the pastime of the experimenter, but the business of men who have to earn their bread before they eat it. True, it has taken some time to bring them to this point, and those who were amongst the early advocates of sugar-growing generally represent themselves as brokenhearted under the discouragements they have received in fostering the slow growth of public opinion. But there is not a reason for the disinclination for new ventures. As a rule, the men engaged in cultivation in this colony are those who cannot afford to make a mistake. The crop is their dependence, and therefore novelty has little charm for and few chances with them. When they do agree to take up a new object or mode of culture, it is because its value has been established by those who have had longer purses than themselves. Men of means ride hobbles, and please themselves with patriotic schemes; but men who have little besides their hands to depend upon stick to the known, and care less for patriotism than profit. The fact, therefore, that there are some 90 or 100 planters who, from what they have seen and heard, have gained sufficient confidence in sugar to risk a portion of their land and labour in its production, is pretty strong evidence that the industry is rooted, and now only needs development.

I, the undersigned auditor, appointed to examine into report upon the accounts of the Curragh Company Winding up, do hereby certify that I have examined the books of the said company and all necessary vouchers, receipts, and returns, and find that the balance-sheet and profit and loss account have been found correct.

THE CITY BANK.

The ninth half-yearly meeting of the proprietors of City Bank was held at the banking house, George-street, at noon, yesterday. Mr. J. L. Montefiore, chairman of the meeting, presided, and the following were the objects of the meeting. The following report was then read and carried by manager—

Resolved, That the Board of Directors of the City Bank, at the priors, at the ninth half-yearly General Meeting, be and they are hereby authorized to sign the following resolution—

Resolved, That the Board of the Company, Sydney, on Tuesday 14th July, 1906.

Your directors have much pleasure in submitting to the meeting the following statement, showing the results of the net profits of the bank during the past six months:

Net profits for the half-year, after deducting rebates on current bills, interest on fixed deposits and current accounts, permitting for bad and doubtful debts, all expenses of management, and duty on coin circulation, and including balance of undivided profits from previous half-year	£11,483
---	---------

Which the directors recommend to be appropriated and divided as follows—

To dividend for the half-year at the rate of 5 per cent. on the paid-up capital	£8,000
Amount written off bank premises, which will now be reduced to £100	100
Additional balance to be carried forward to next half-year's account	3,383
	£11,483

The premises now occupied not suffering sufficient accommodation for the rapidly increasing business of the bank, the directors have purchased an eligible site for the erection of suitable offices.

The dividend is now payable.

Ditto 1860	Green	A splendid wine in every respect. Strong, full, and flavour, good body, and high natural spirit. (These two examples are equal to any known)
Ditto 1866	White	Not equal to the above, but a fine wine, clean, good body, free from acidity, soft and pleasant.
Ditto 1866	Pink	Slightly more tart, inferior to the above.

finished. The two last weekly sales have been of a most important character even for the old season. The only any consequence would be, BR. 15s. gross, at 100, at 6 1/2; mixed, at 24; DCM, 24 floss, at 1 1/2; 1 1/2 in diamond, 7 scored, at 15d. A few people, however, will, in case, have been placed privately at about last month's quotations.

For the 1st. — Very large quantities have come forward to the boiling-down establishments, and were taken by buyers at an advance of about 1d. per lb. on last week's quotations — say 4 1/2, to 5 1/2, for full, and 3 1/2, for short and inferior, and 1 1/2, to 2 1/2, for pelts.

For the 2nd. — The very brisk demand existing for colonial hides has forced prices up to a considerable extent, as for the latter market from purchasing to advancing, from present appearances, the supply of Australian hides to the London market will take that reduction of what were formerly shipped. The Straithorn ship shipment engaged, but we understand that the Liberator nor Golden Sea will take any. As the hides have been selling at 15s. 6d. to 20s. 3d. for a pair, or a parcel averaging 7 lbs., first heavy, realised up to 19s. 3d., medium, 12s. to 15s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. for the light; yearlings and calfskins are much wanted, 6s. to 7s. 6d. for the former and 2s. 9d. to 3s. for the latter; and 10s. 6d. to 16s. for kangaroo skins, 14s. to 18s. for seals.

For the 3rd. — Transactions continue large, and shipments are well and unprecedented. The weekly sales have been attended, and last month's prices well maintained. The exports of mutton from the boiling-down establishments have changed hands at £34 to £34 10s. for well-

IMPORT MARKETS.—Trade has been commonly dull during the past fortnight. It has been augmented by the arrivals of Alexander Duthie and Marquis of Argyle, London, and Leonide from Glasgow, with coal cargoes; Hannah Broomfield, from India, and Talca, from Mauritius, with sugar; Edgar Ross, from Bangkok, with rice. Buyers seem more disposed to realise, and the market generally has a declining tendency. A fair amount of business has been done with inland from second hands, and this trade is likely to increase. Government returns of bonded stocks give the following quantities as on the 10th instant:—Rum, 22,670 casks; brandy, 106,937 gallons; geneva, 18 gallons; whisky, 6054 gallons; liqueurs, 18 gallons; gin, 3993 gallons; all other spirits, 3734 gallons. Wine, 248,204 gallons.

WOLVES.—Prices have advanced to 24. 50, to 24. 75.
WOLFSKINS.—Prices have declined considerably, and best of full weights have been selling at 10 1/4 to 11 1/4.
WOLFE AND TIGRIS.—Plantation coffee sold by auction, duty paid; private sales of small quantities to be at 180. to 10 1/4, in bonds and Java at 8 1/2;
in its strong demand at 3 1/2, to 3 1/4.
WOLFE IN FRUITS.—All descriptions are in full supply;
prices have not improved.
WOLFE GOODS.—There are buyers of comacks at 11s.
others ask 12s.; woolpacks sold at 4s. for full s.
WOLFE.—The market is slightly firmer. Stocks of cardines coming reduced, and an advance of 3d. per dozen has been obtained; 1-lb. salmon has also improved.
WOLFE.—Late arrivals and expected shipments have been at the market earlier. Bulk size is selling at 47 to 48 for best brands, and other qualities at 25 1/2 to 26 1/2.
to be bottled, is a trifle easier, and in full supply. Bulk maintains its value, say 45 1/2 to 46 1/2, but not quite as much as before. Bulk brands. In bulk brands, except for choice brands. In bulk brands,
re reported at 88. 3d. to 88. 5d. for Hennessy's first-class, second-class, 3d. to 31s. 6d. for sale; Hennessy's case, 30s. to 31s. 6d. for
24s. to 25s. 6d.; Martell's, at auction, brought 28s. 6d.

...rates, but for inferior grades rates are accepted. A large trade has been done privately during the month and stocks are now down to a lower point than they have been for many years back; of rats, the market may be said to be cleared, and what stocks remain of good medium to the Kailash qualities, these are at not far from last month's rates, viz. 27 to 30, 31 to 33, per matty paid. New tea cannot be looked for before the end of September. No change to report. Stocks abundant, and we show no disposition to buy largely. Negroes quoted from 1s. to 1s. 4d.; homebreds from 6d. to 1s. according to quality; arumatics 1s. 3d. to 2s. 6d. Our stock of Manilla has not been touched, but evinces a disposition to realize. Havanah shaves none quoted during the month at 80s. per 100, a 6s. 6d. Hamburg cigars are more in demand.
